Inheritor of a distinguished scientific family tradition tracing back more than two hundred years—Joseph Priestley, who discovered oxygen, was his great, great, great, great grandfather—James Priestley was born in Des Moines, Iowa on April 7, 1903. He received his B.A. (1923) and M.D. (1926) degrees from the University of Pennsylvania, where he played varsity lacrosse. He interned at the University of Pennsylvania Hospital and entered the Mayo Graduate School of Medicine in 1928. His record as a fellow was exemplary: first assistant in research and Master of Science in experimental surgery, 1931; first assistant in surgery and urology and Doctor of Philosophy in surgery, 1932. In 1933 he was appointed to the staff of the Mayo Clinic and in 1934 he became the head of a section of surgery. He became certified as a specialist by the American Board of Surgery in 1940 and became of professor of surgery in 1948.

Dr. Priestley began active service in the United States Army as a medical officer in 1943. He served with and later commanded the 237th Station hospital; volunteered for duty with a combat surgical team that went in with troops hitting Pacific Theater beaches; earned two Bronze Stars. He was discharged in 1945 with the rank of colonel.

His work as a surgeon ranged from an earlier interest in urologic and gynecologic procedures to a later focus on surgical problems of the upper abdomen, stomach, duodenum, pancreas, biliary tract and adrenals. He performed the world’s first pancreatectomy in 1942. He authored 327 scientific works, including several books.
He was a member of numerous medical and surgical societies and served as president of the following: the American College of Surgeons, Central Surgical Association, Western Surgical Association, Society of Clinical Surgery and the Interstate Postgraduate Medical Association of North America. In addition to his heavy surgical and related medical duties, he was a member of the Mayo Clinic’s Board of Governors for eighteen years and was chairman of the Board for eight years. He was also a member of the Board of Trustees of Mayo Foundation for fourteen years.

In graduate medical education, his surgical skill and personal example left an enduring mark on countless young physicians and, in turn, on others taught by them. On April 7, 1965 (his sixty-second birthday), 70 of his former first assistants in surgery formed the Priestley Society, to honor him in the “continuation, promotion, and diffusion of knowledge of the fine art and science of surgery.” The society originally confined itself to fellows who had served as first assistants. However, after his retirement in 1968, it became evident that membership should be opened to any who have completed surgical residency at Mayo Clinic. In subsequent years, the Society would become open to all who completed surgical training or were appointed to the staff at Mayo Clinic.

Dr. Priestley passed away on Friday, February 9, 1979 of a heart attack while vacationing at Vero Beach, Florida. He was survived by his wife Klea, three daughters, one son and twelve grandchildren. His legacy lies in the numerous surgical trainees and their subsequent trainees who have benefited from his clinical expertise, his quest for surgical excellence and his compassion.
