Mayo School of Continuing Medical Education

Friday–Sunday
December 7-9, 2007

FireSky Resort & Spa
Scottsdale, Arizona

www.mayo.edu
COURSE HIGHLIGHTS

This is a three-day program for dermatologists, oncologists, physicians in internal medicine, family practice and general practice. The first day is an update on melanoma epidemiology, prevention, pathology, radiologic imaging for diagnosis, and treatment. It focuses on cutting-edge information that brings new therapy from the basic science arena.

The last two days are an in-depth immersion into dermoscopy. The information will target both the novice and experienced dermoscopist. It will include a comprehensive exposure to dermoscopic evaluation of melanocytic and nonmelanocytic lesions. Participants will develop practical skills that will enable them to be more comfortable approaching patients with atypical skin lesions. This course is primarily targeted to clinicians, but educators and residents will find it valuable as a springboard to develop dermoscopy training programs.

COURSE LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of this course, participants should be able to:

DERMOSCOPY:

• Interpret the findings on dermoscopy of malignant and benign skin lesions.
• Utilize dermoscopy to guide skin biopsy decisions.
• Explain differences between the dermoscopy diagnosis algorithms.

MELANOMA:

• Identify worldwide epidemiologic trends for melanoma.
• Describe the current prevention efforts for melanoma.
• Interpret pathologic records of difficult pigmented lesions.
• Recognize and direct management of large congenital nevi.
• Interpret pathologic markers of prognosis for melanoma.
• Interpret genetic markers of melanoma.
• Recognize appropriate treatment for metastatic melanoma.
• Recognize the importance of multidisciplinary care for patients with melanoma.
• Direct appropriate follow-up of melanoma patients.
