27th annual cases in ECHOCARDIOGRAPHY, CARDIAC CT, AND MRI

THE MERITAGE RESORT
NAPA, CALIFORNIA
OCTOBER 25–28, 2017

COURSE DIRECTORS:
Heidi M. Connolly, M.D., Fletcher A. Miller, Jr., M.D., & Rick A. Nishimura, M.D.
COURSE DESCRIPTION
This advanced course is designed to provide the clinician and sonographer with an update on transthoracic, stress, and transesophageal echocardiography as well as cardiac CT and MRI. It is not a “how-to” course, but instead will concentrate on the application of these modalities to clinical decision making.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES
- Utilize cardiovascular imaging modalities to aid in clinical decision making for evaluation and management of patients with valvular heart disease
- Identify normal and abnormal features of patients with prosthetic valves
- Identify the pitfalls of interpretation with exercise and dobutamine stress echocardiography
- Apply Doppler hemodynamics and strain imaging into clinical decision-making in patients with heart failure symptoms with both normal and abnormal systolic function
- Describe a systematic approach to echocardiography for patients with complex congenital heart disease
- Recognize the utility of echocardiography in patients with acute ischemic syndromes and other acute illnesses requiring admission to the intensive care unit
- Identify common indications and potential pitfalls for intraoperative and interventional transesophageal echocardiography

INTENDED AUDIENCE
This course is intended for physicians and sonographers with an advanced background in echocardiography.
