• Novel agents for cancer therapy

Registration Now Open ce.mayo.edu/hem-malig2017

Course Directors:
William J. Hogan, M.B., B.Ch.
Mark R. Litzow, M.D.
COURSE DESCRIPTION
This two-day program focuses on the role of new therapies in treating patients with hematologic malignancies and place the evolving role of blood and marrow transplantation (BMT) in the appropriate context of these new therapies. An overview of the role of BMT in many of the hematologic malignancies is discussed, as well as an update on new cellular therapies related to BMT and how to best provide long-term follow-up for these patients.

COURSE LEARNING OBJECTIVES
Upon conclusion of this program, participants should be able to:

• Utilize patient stratification strategies to determine the most appropriate therapies for patients with hematologic malignancies
• Integrate the blood and marrow transplantation (BMT) process into current treatment strategies when clinically indicated to improve patient outcomes
• Discuss appropriate care of long-term survivors of BMT
• Describe relevant pharmacologic issues related to the polypharmacy of patients in the post-BMT period
• Discuss the management of post-transplant relapse of acute leukemia

Attendance at this Mayo Clinic course does not indicate nor guarantee competence or proficiency in the performance of any procedures which may be discussed or taught in this course.

DATE AND LOCATION
The Hematologic Malignancies: New Therapies and the Evolving Role of Transplant is March 17-18, 2017. Course headquarters is located at the Westin Chicago River North, 320 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, IL.

INTENDED AUDIENCE
This program is designed for primary hematology and oncology clinicians, nurse practitioners, physician assistants, and other practitioners working in cancer medicine.
